

Hello, my name is Logan Hammer. I grew up on a farm in a small town in central Michigan, as a young adult I lived in south Texas and three years ago moved to the South Jersey area. Growing up in a small farm town I always looked on my community as an extension of my family. I was active in 4-H, student government, school athletics, and local government from a very young age. I spent most of my childhood and young adult life outside hunting, fishing, and farming. Graduating from Evert High School with high academic honors, I then attended Ferris State University and graduated with a bachelor's degree in Welding Engineering Technology. During my time at Ferris State, I competed in cross country and track & field. Being a student athlete taught me the importance of a hard work ethic and dedication. I also had the opportunity to join a volunteer group and work with Special Olympics athletes which was an unbelievable experience. After college I moved to south Texas and started my career as an inspector in the oil and gas industry. My career is the reason I ended up in South Jersey. After being in New Jersey for a short time I met my beautiful wife Lindsay; she has two young boys and together we just welcomed another little boy into the world. On my free time I enjoy playing in the back yard with my stepsons, going for walks through the neighborhood as a family, or taking a simple ride around on the golf cart. Collings Lakes will always hold a special place in my heart, and I look forward to giving back to the community that gave me a family.
